Creating compatibility requires a theme that threads visual continuity, but is not "cookie-cutter." It means that facilities, from the room to the street, meet mission requirements, reflect their function, and create places "where you want to be."

THE AIR FORCE CENTER FOR ENVIRONMENTAL EXCELLENCE (AFCEE)

The Air Force Center for Environmental Excellence provides a complete range of world class environmental, architectural and landscape architectural, planning and construction management services and products. Beginning with its formation in 1991, AFCEE has worked hard to become the best choice in Air Force service agencies.

A field operating agency of The Civil Engineer of the Air Force, AFCEE has seven distinct business lines, each with its own technical and support staffs. Its in-house staff includes over 400 people in technical, scientific and essential support fields. This includes 70 dedicated contracting experts who work side by side with AFCEE project managers to provide real-time customer support.

2000 AMERICAN SOCIETY LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTS ANNUAL MEETING & EXPO

Stay for the 2000 ASLA Convention, Oct 27-30, in St. Louis, Missouri. It promises all of the things that make a convention worth going to: a great location, interesting tours, terrific food, friends and colleagues you haven't seen in a while and as always, a chance to earn the entire year's worth of CEUs learning units in four activity-packed days.

Watch the ASLA National website <http://www.asla.org> for more information.
